PARTNER

Anthony C. Giletto concentrates his practice in Pennsylvania and New Jersey workers' compensation defense litigation matters. Since early in his career, he has practiced at regional defense firms, handling all aspects of workers' compensation matters on behalf of employers, self-insureds, third-party administrators, and insurance carriers. Anthony has handled and managed all aspects of workers' compensation litigation from inception to conclusion, including but not limited to initial investigations, legal advice regarding accepting/denying claims, attendance at hearings, trial depositions, brief/motion writing, and settlement negotiations.

In workers' compensation matters, clients face numerous challenges, including deciphering whether to accept claims and/or, attempting to limit exposure for accepted claims in accordance with the applicable laws in any particular state. In order to provide valuable and worthwhile counsel, defense attorneys must possess a substantive understanding of the law and attention to detail. They should also understand how to practically evaluate and implement strategies to limit exposure. Anthony has consistently displayed proficiency in these skills, representing his clients with practical and effective strategies, resulting in beneficial and valuable results for his clients.

Outside of his practice, Anthony enjoys golfing and other recreational sports, and is also involved with a local animal rescue, which places pets with fosters and/or adopters.
